BALTIMORE, MD., July 14.—If a woman cannot throw a stone, she can play base-ball, and win, too, for word reached here yesterday that nine well known women of the Eastern Shore, and nine men, including Secretary of State Oswald Tlighmun, all the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James M. If. Bateman, at Tred Avon, near Easton, had a game of ball a few days ago, in which the women won by the score of 10 to 8.

During the progress of the game several of the women plainly showed that they could play ball as well as tennis, and in the majority of the cases outfielded and outbatted the men, who had not played for many years.

Miss Kate Elliott won the applause of all by a long drive to left field for a home run. Mr. Tilghman, at third base, played like a boy of nineteen years, and was as agile as a cat. He made several fine catches of high files.

the championship for amateur base-ball in Virginia. In administering the terribio defeat to the visitors the leaders of the local league have a clear title to the honor, and until some other nine in the Twin City League snatches the first place, the Brownies will be the recognized champions.

From start to finish the game was a thrilling one. There was not a dull inning, and until the last man was out in the ninth, it was not altogether certain that the shutout was to be scored. In the third inning the Brownies scored two runs on an error of Gaswright at first runs on an error of Gaswright at first base, and again, in the seventh, with two singles and an error, two runners spiked

Bad Team Work.

Emporia showed up hadly in team work. Hobbs, who did the pitching, held the champions down to six hifs, and the game should have been different. His support was not of a high order at times, while Hulcher was given the very best of support all through the game. Only one error is chalked up against the Brownies, and this was made by the pitcher, who was responsible for the victory. The game opened well for the visitors. The Brownies went to bat and Bowers proceeded to knock the microbes. Mc-Evoy, usually a good litter, also ozoned, and Rose was allowed to walk. Sharp dumped one down to short, and Rose expired at second.

Catcher Hobbs started the ball to rolling for the Emporia delegation by getting next to one of Hulcher's drops and sending the sphere sizzling through short. Heath pasted a good one. Hill struck the ball just enough to get Hobbs thrown out at third. Reville sent one down to Hulcher, who threw to third, catching Heath. Three hits were chalked against Hulcher in the second inping, but never a run did the visitors make. The Brownies sent Hulcher to bat in the third. He ripped a corking single, and McLeavy made a pretty sacrifice, advancing the runner to second. Hulcher pilfered bag No. 3, and tried to make it home on Bowers's slow one to the infield. The runner died at the home plate from short stop, but Bowers anchored on first. Mc-Evoy thereupon pasted a pretty single and advanced Bowers to third. Rose sent a grass-burner down to first and Gaswright let him go through him. Bowers and McEvoy trotted across the rubber.

Experiment Farm.

Experiment Farm.

The afternoon was spent on the experiment farm. The entire corps of professors who are engaged in work at the experiment station accompanied the party. Each professor had a party in charge, but occasionally the groups would "bunch," and all would be listening to one talker. It is impossible to give within the compass of this dispatch anything approaching a fair idea of the extent and scope of the work being done in the experiment station. The farmers were most deeply interested in the experiments being conducted in the growth of crops, in breeding in particular, veterinary science, bacteriology, mycology and chemistry, all aimed to achieve results which enable the man who tills the soil to secure therefrom the best possible return. The questions with which the professors were being piled all the time indicated the intelligent as well as eager interest which the visitors took in that which they saw. When the excursionists assembled at the station to be in the return trip, at 5 o'clock, Captain W. W. Berkely, of Roanoke, made a speech expressing the farmers' appreciation of the courtestes shown them, and also their complete realization of the value of the work being done at the experiment station.

High Commendation.

Later a paper setting forth the magnitude and the value of the work being done by Professor Soule and his associates and commending the experiment station to the continued liberality of the Legislature of Virginja, was signed by nearly 300 delegates, all that could be reached. The paper is as follows:

"We, the undersigned, who have had the opportunity of inspecting the work of Dean Soute and the staff of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, desire to place on record our unqualified approval of the efforts of these gentlemen to elevate the pursuit of agriculture to the plane it should occupy as a vocation for young men of intelligence and ambition, and we cordially and heartily commend them to to the support of the people of the State, and especially to the Legislature, and ask that this institution be fostered and developed in a manner commensurate with the agricultural interests of this State by such liberal appropriations as the finances of the State will justify.

"We believe that one of the most effective instrumentalities which has been devised in modern times for educating our farmers is the farmers' institute, and we would like to see the State avail itself of the experience of the more progressive States which have organized the farmers' institute as a separate and distinct institution, with a central organization, which shall cover the entire State, and foster every agricultural integest."

A hundred or more delegates from Southwest Virginia bade farewell to the eastern delegates at Christiansburg, and took the west-bound train for their homes. It was not 7 o'clock when the east-bourn party reached Roanoke. The delegates generally left on night trains for their homes on the Southside or Tidewater or Pledmont or the Valley.

Signal Success.

Signal Success.

There has not been such a successful convention of farmers in the history of agriculture in Virginia as the one which ended to-day. It was far more largely attended than any ever before held in Virginia, and those who have been regular attendants say they have never heard addresses of such a high character. There is abundant evidence that the farmers of the State are thoroughly aroused concerning the necessity of organization and of the application of modern acientific methods in agriculture. I asked a foremost member of the institute to-day what this movement meant. He replied: "It means that the next ten years are going to witness greater strides in Virginia agriculturally than has ever been made in any fifty years of our history." Signal Success.

Sharp controversics and considerable bad feeling has been engendered between the Wilmington parties and members of the committee having the location of the farm in charge.
